

Chinmay Bhise, NSF APNA Youth Ambassador

The summer couldn't be any better this time. I visited India with a mission, to teach underprivileged kids. And I'm glad that I took this responsibility because it proved to be a unique and rewarding experience. I would again sign up when I visit India next time.

When I signed up for the workshop, I did not know what to expect. Teaching to kids in India was really going to be a challenge for me since it was my first teaching experience. The kids were enthusiastic to learn and asking questions. Even the staff was quite friendly. Your parent is allowed to attend the session, in case you need any help translating. A small 'Thank-You' ceremony at the end of workshop was really touching.

I thank NSF for providing this wonderful opportunity and Mr. Venkat Gade for his support and encouragement.
